Speaking during the handover ceremony, the Director-General said, "Throughout my term, I will do everything possible to strengthen the ties that bind us closely together."

"Although symbolic, this key has tremendous significance. If we work in an effective and efficient manner, we can collectively unlock success for the entire postal industry," said Mr Metoki.

The Deputy Director-General added, "During my term in office, I encourage the responsible owners [of the Post] to define the role of the Post in their environment and to support its development. The Universal Postal Union will thus guide, coordinate and help members to enhance the quality and importance of postal services."
